I understand that, paragliding has its own charm. However, it also brings its share of hazards. It is important that even though the best of equipment is involved and all the logistics being taken care of, participants and their parents/guardians must be aware of the realities of the many possible hazards in undertaking any adventure activity, these include, but are not limited to:

- 1) Sudden change in, and extremes of, weather conditions;
- 2) Equipment Failure;
- 3) Sudden ariel disturbance
- 4) Natural calamities like Land Slides, Floods, Avalanches;
- 5) Falls on steep or difficult terrain, that is dangerous or difficult to negotiate, including dense bushes, rough and slippery ground including sand and rock;
- 6) River crossings;
- 7) Getting lost in remote or inaccessible areas;
- 8) Encounters with wildlife or birds of prey;
- 9) Bites from insects and reptiles;
- 10) All other risks, hazards and dangers associated with outdoor activities;
- 11) Discomfort due to travel to and from activities.

The following events and conditions can contribute to the inherent risks of the activities:

- 1) Inappropriate or inadequate equipment or clothing;
- 2) Poor or inadequate physical fitness or health;
